Campus Police catch suspect Friday morning.

Suspect charged in the recent locker break-ins

By Paul Legge

Last Friday at approximately 11:00 a.m., a suspect was caught in connection with the locker break-ins at Scarborough Campus. The suspect was apprehended by Scarborough Campus Police within twenty minutes after the description was received through tips from students and others. The suspect was caught on the third floor of the R-wing. Among those who tipped off security were Elaine Fanning at the SAC desk and SCSC secretary Kay Kelman.

Fanning called the Campus Police after students had reported seeing a suspicious male in a 'Seneca College' jacket milling around the lockers. One of these individuals who contacted Fanning was Louis Samomas who reported seeing this person 'pulling' on the lockers.

Kelman of SCSC also reported to the Campus Police after receiving complaints from students.

Campus Police had been given a description of the suspicious person earlier in the morning and were already in the R-wing searching for the person. According to Seargent Harris and Constable McGhee, the individual was caught as he exited from the locker area and was cautioned (advised of his rights) by Constable McGhee, the 'arresting' officer, and brought to the security office.

Even before 43rd division of the Metro Police had arrived, the suspect had admitted guilt to the locker break-ins that day as well as previous others on the Scarborough Campus. The count as of last Friday was 21 broken loeks turned into the Security office.

The suspect was immediately charged with "breaking and entering with further charges pending" said McGhee. Those further charges pending could be 'theft'. A bill was also submitted to the Metro Police for damage to the lockers.

When asked what the suspect had used, Corporal Chaput said it was "two kitchen knives taped together". Even though this may look like an amateur job, the Campus Police all agreed that the person was a 'pro' and had broken into all the lockers within a ten minute period that day. It was also revealed that the person was neither a Seneca College nor a U of T student. Police speculated that the jacket had been worn to make the person look less conspicuous.

Seargent Harris summed up the students' contribution to the arrest as "if we don't have the co-operation of the students, they (lawbreakers) will get away with murder."

SCSC Secretary Kay Kelman stated that one of the lockers broken into had been that of a partially blind woman and that SCSC would give the woman a new lock.

A report by 43rd Police Division will be forwarded to the Campus Police in the near future.

We saw this little feller just running around on the downtown campus and thought he looked cute. Pretend he (or she) is a reindeer and get into the Christmas spirit.

To All...

We at the Underground would like to wish all students and faculty a very Merry Holiday.

This is our last issue for this year and we thank everyone who made this first half possible. Happy Holidays!

U of T gets $13 million

By Hanif Sarangi

Christmas has been especially kind to the University of Toronto this year. The University received an estimated $13 million after taxes and legal fees following a court action to change the will of John Biles, co-founder of Canadian Tire. The U. of T. was the largest beneficiary of an $83 million donation, one of the largest such donations in Canada.

John Biles, who died suddenly of pneumonia in 1956, named 23 charities in his will, among them U. of T. and several other colleges and educational institutes. The will stated that the charities receive their donation in stocks. A clause in the will however stated that whereas the charities could collect dividends on the shares, the shares themselves could not be sold.

The recipients of the endowment went to the Supreme Court of Ontario in June 1983 to change the will. A court decision early in November removed the final obstacles to the sale of the shares. The charities received an amount owing, in full, of over $83 million from the sale of one million common shares and 450,000 class A shares.

Although the $13 million received by the University of Toronto is a sizable donation, it will not have a great effect on the University's current underfunding problem. SAC President Bob Jones explained it was his understanding that the money would be placed in the University's General Funds Pool of which an added $13 million would not be a significant increase.

Bob White, U. of T. Assistant Vice-President of Finance, has stated that some of the money would also be used for scholarships and medical research.

Waite resigns

By Valerie Alexander

Last Friday Peter Waite, Executive Asistant to SAC President Bob Jones, resigned.

In an interview with The Underground, Waite dismissed any suspicions about a conflict with Bob Jones. Rather, Waite resigned because he was offered a job with the Canadian Bar Association.

Waite has been involved with SAC for two years and feels that he is leaving SAC in a better position than he found it.

Recently, SAC had had a "tough time" with the Scarborough Stables, and Waite feels he has contributed to better relations between Scarborough and SAC. Waite said he is pleased with this accomplishment because it is good to be "in touch with people."

Reminiscent of his job with SAC and its members, he said he is "going to miss this place."

Waite's new job includes co-ordinating the work of differ-committees such as family, corporate and trust law. Each committee has to be updated and Waite's new employer lobbies government to have laws changed.

WUSC initiates fund

By Phil Holder

For the past week, International Devolopment Students have been intensely involved in raising money for the Ethiopian Crisis Fund.

In recognition of the intricate problems which afflict the Ethiopian people, organizations such as WUSC (World University Service of Canada), have initiated nation wide fund drives to deal effectively with this debilitating problem. At present, WUSC Fund drives across Canada have raised a total of $30,000. Last week, Scarborough students had donated a hefty $500 to the crisis fund, of which half of this amount was raised in just two days.

This continued push by Scarborough students was part of a co-ordinated effort to raise funds which will be donated to WUSC, which is a non-profit organization involved in the sponsoring of persecuted Third World students to Canada.

Due to the crisis within Ethiopia, WUSC have petitioned the United Nations for funds in order to set up an infrastructure to further more aid to all Ethiopians who are suffering from this terrible drought. This infrastructure, now firmly established, is being utilized for the distribution of food and medical supplies throughout the nation.

On behalf of WUSC, the International Development Students Co-operative would like to thank all Scarborough students for their concern and support for the progress being made in Ethiopia.

Concordia University files complaints against 'sexist' paper

MONTREAL (CUP) - Three students and one research group at Concordia University have filed complaints against the November issue of the engineering and computer science students' newspaper, calling the newspaper racist, sexist, homophobic, and libellous.

Concordia's Quebec Public Interest Research Group, which was attacked on almost each of the Bogge News' eight pages, filed one of the suits.

"The group felt that there was a lot of hate espoused in this Bogge News," Dan Berman, a second year social science student at Concordia and a member of Q-PIRG, said. "I think the worst part is that a member of Q-PIRG is an engineering student and has to look at them (engineering students) every day."

Berman said engineering students are hostile to Q-PIRG because it sponsored a referendum last year to make Concordia a military-free zone. The motion passed narrowly.

"A lot of military research money goes to engineering and computer science," Berman said.

Other students objected to an article discussing ways the cartoon character Fred Flintstone had sex with his wife, Wilma.

"This intrusion was supposedly accomplished with the aid of carpenter's clamps and vices which stretched Wilma to insane proportions to accomodate Fred," the article reads.

Karen Herland, one of the students filing suit with the Concordia student association judicial board, wrote in her complaint, "Granted, this refers to a pair of animated people; however, the violence of the language and the assumptions . . . (are) based on stereotypes that are very real."

Another student's complaint referred to a cartoon which says, "I have nothing against the women's movement, I love a woman's movement."

Peter Byrne, president of Concordia's Engineering and Computer Sciences Student Council, publisher of Bogge News, believes the judicial board Plaintiffs simply can't appreciate "The Bogge type of humour."

"My personal feeling is that some people don't like this newspaper, just like some people don't like the Link (the Concordia's student newspaper), he said. "To me, it just shows that some people can't handly satire. Do they ever pick up Mad Magazine?"

Last semester Concordia's student judicial board defined sexism as "the assumption of the inherent superiority of one sex over the other."

Requests for judicial board action if the publisher is found guilty of sexism include freezing the student council budget and punitive action against the executive.

Meeting Place roof under repair to stop rain

By Valerie Alexander

During the last week, some of you may have noticed a group of tied chairs within the Meeting Place.

There is a constant worry that events scheduled in the Meeting Place will be ruined due to leakage from the roof. Workmen are temporarily removing the skylight to put in a new material, in order to stop further leakage. The old roof was eighteen years old and the cohesive material used to keep the skylights in place was worn out. Due to this, there are buckets in the Meeting Place whenever it rains.

Tom Poppleton, Superintendant of Building Maintenance, stated that the construction was a "normal maintenance replacement."

Sonarfil is being used to correct the leakage from the skylights. Sonarfil is a rubberized compound put together under heat and provides a "perfect seal."

The construction took a week and a half to complete and cost $30,000.

To catch a thief

At the end of last week, a suspect was charged in connection with the locker break-ins on the Scarborough Campus. the suspect was apprehended after students called the Campus Security.

As the person responsible for the story, I feel compelled to write about the subject of security on the Scarborough Campus. In trying to cover the event as thoroughly and accurately as possible, I felt a sense of apprehension from some of the Constables present. After discussing details of that day, I also heard some complaints they had, specifically from Corporal Chaput. Chaput gave me the impression that the Campus Police have in the past, been portrayed as stupid and that they haven't been given a fair shake in previous media reports and in complaints against them.

And throughout the discussion with a few of the officers, I could sense that they were upset about reports that they deemed as inaccurate, and I agreed with them.

Our Security Force at Scarborough College has received flak on many occasions. They've been accused of ineptness and simply, of not performing their job adequately. Last Friday they did their job, and they did it well. The suspect was apprehended and he had admitted to the break-ins even before the Metro Police had arrived.

Our Campus Police are there to perform a job: to assist in all aspects of security on Campus. This includes the locking of doors, patrolling of the Campus, and unfortunately, even the ticketing of cars. Although one may question how well they perform these duties, they are being done. It might also be interesting to note that some of the Campus Police are past Police Officers and are very knowledgeable of all Police practices and justice in general

What I found as a press person when speaking to some of the members of the Campus Police was that I was on the defensive. I could see that they were frustrated by past problems, accusations, and misquotes in the media. I also could see that they (at least Officers McGhee and Chaput) were intent and positive on their job performance and efforts.

I think it's time to start anew. Our force performed its job well last week. Let's hope that they continue to do so and can keep improving themselves to such an extent that unwarranted criticism will be just that.

RESOLUTION OF THE SCSP

The Underground's Board of Directors will be seeking an increase in our current fee levy in the new year. The Board of Directors invites and requests the opinions of the students registered at this college.

While the paper's expenses have increased this year, revenue lags far behind that of last year. In these difficult economic times, the paper is in dire financial straits and will be seeking an increase of approximately $2.00 per full time student.

Details will be published in the new year. Inquiries should be directed to the Underground office H213C.

Letters, Letters, Lett

Letter to the Editor

Thank you for the fair-minded approach taken by The Underground in covering the issue of the closure of the SAC Stables, an approach that allowed you to see beyond the emotional appeal felt by some and the college loyalty felt by others. You discovered the heart of the issue: the fact that SAC has been spending too much of the students' money on something that serves too few students.

A new era has hit at SAC, an era of fiscal responsibility. Changes are necessary if SAC is ever going to serve the students of this university in the way that it should. Closing the stables is only one of many changes that are changing the way SAC serves you. There is much that still must be done, thank you, Mr. Editor, for saying it for me: "the Stables are closed...., let SAC get back to working on more deserving issues."

Linda Quirk
V.P. Corporations, SAC

To the Editor:

I would like to reply to the Nov. 27 Editorial "All for One, One for All" and clarify our position is opposing the hiring of MacLean and MacLean.

MacLean and MacLean would have cost us between $4500 and $5000. Their fee will be $2500, a sum much larger than any we have seen before. Cleanup costs will amount to over $1500. $2000 is a close estimate. The employment of police will be necessary; at 50 dollars a night. Unfortunately, ticket sales will only amount to $1200, assuming we sell out prior to the event ($4 x 300). Our requests for the prices to be set at $6 or $7 were ignored. Obviously your Student Council will have to absorb the loss.

This year, the 100th anniversary of the admission of women into the University of Toronto, is a special one in terms of equality. My research has indicated that MacLean and MacLean are definitely sexist and derogatory to the female gender. Even amongst Council members there is agreement on this point. To hire them while trying to set up a Women's Committee appears to be hypocritical.

In a College of 5000 students, the 300 who will be attending this event (many of whom will not be from Scarb.) are a clear minority. To spend so much for these people offended the three of us who voted against the act. Unfortunately, four members abstained (one absent) and the vocal "majority" of six pushed the motion through (as they tried to do last week after some members had left for class). Since I have been congratulated for my actions by some students, I am sure I am representing the will of some of my electors. Surely the principle of representative democracy is to prevent the "tyranny of the masses" (all 300 of them).

No, I am not a hermit. I was unable to attend Octoberfest because I had to sing with the University choir (Hart House Chorus) that day. In the last two weeks I have been to the Pucka (sic) Orchestra, the Twisters, the Orford String Quartet and the Steel Band last Wednesday. It is a pity that the Underground chose not to cover this last act. Despite being held during the day, attracting well over 300 "fans" and delighting everyone, AACSA spent very little on them. This then is a (sic) example of proper money management.

To quote Patti O'Rourke out of contest (sic) is not responsible journalism. I am sure the students of Scarborough recognise the differences between Ozzy Osbourne and Anne Murray.

I consider it a privlege to serve and represent the students. I welcome any suggestions and/or comments they may have. I intend to continue representing them despite the lead of those who are only interested in doing that which is politically expedient.

Yours sincerely,
David Tang

Ethiopia:

Is the drought the reason that Ethiopia is encountering so much pain and suffering?

By Peter Abrams

This Christmas may be made very different, and indeed probably already is, due to our awareness of the human suffering and tragedy unfolding in sub-Saharan Africa. As you and your family are sitting comfortably around the Christmas dinner table, enjoying a plentiful and satisfying repast, the conversation may very well centre on the crisis in Ethiopia. And if someone turns to you and asks "why", what will you answer? How will you respond to your own uneasy feelings and uncertain questions? Is "the drought" to blame,. . . the cause of such massive human loss and degradation, Ethiopia's "worst enemy"?

Single causal explanations are both misleading and simplistic. They can be insulting and manipulative, exploiting our natural, healthy emotional response. Part of our responsibility as university students and concerned human beings in general, is to realize that our emotional arousal, while being a very valuable and powerful way of awakening and connecting ourselves with the outside world, is an insufficient and often harmful reaction if it becomes our sole response. We owe it to ourselves and those in need of our support to seek informed opinions and gain a comprehensive, balanced assessment of a very difficult situation. A broader, mature understanding is personally beneficial and can help us guide public and government policy towards respectful and relevant development programs.

Historically, the drought occuring now is not longer or drier than many that have occurred in the past 2-5 thousand years. Professor Rorke Bryan, supervisor of studies in the International Development Studies program and accomplished soil conservationist, spoke of sophisticated geographical technical analysis that shows this dry period to be well within the range of normal, climatic fluctuation, although this is the most extreme drought this century. The disaster proneness of Ethiopia relates to, and is derived from social, political and economic factors. The drought in other words, was the final straw that broke the camel's back. So what conditions have led to such a precarious situation?

Politically, the country has its fair share of corruption, graft and hypocrisy. This has contributed to the vast inequality between the majority of the population (small peasant farmers and nomadic pastoralists), and isolated urban elite.

The continuing guerilla wars drain the energy and threaten the well-being of everyone involved. Yet this scenario is not unique to Ethiopia. So what else has created a situation of such horrifying dimension? More specifically, how have conditions for the rural people changed from the past?

Professor Bryan stresses two factors. "Fundamentally, the problems arise from population size and lack of mobility. The key to the drought strategies people employed in the past, was an ability to move if any situation became adverse, either politically or climatically. In order to cope with erratic patterns in timing and location of rainfall and widespread drought, people passed on and shared extensive environmental knowledge detailing the location of emergency pasture sites, reliable sources of water, etc. This unbroken tradition of oral communication assumed the peoples' ability to migrate, whether to find new pastures for their livestock, or bring new fields under till in the practice of shifting cultivation.

"Has anything changed to prevent traditional coping mechanisms from working?" poses Professor Bryan. First, the population increased dramitically. This was made possible by a number of factors. Well drilling programs allowed people to spread over more of the country, raise more cattle and crops and therefore, support a larger family. This trend was supported by the introduction of medicine, public health and education amongst the people, not increasing the birth rate, but decreasing the death rate.

A very important factor was the sequence of exceptionally good weather years from 1945-68, which provided benevolant climatic conditions that brought enough water to all areas of the country and crucially supported the technological "Green Revolution" that had been introduced by the West.

These natural and man-made "improvements" allowed nomads and their cattle to move to marginal, arid areas, while sedentary agriculturalists spread in and filled up all available spaces. Simultaneously, the government instituted agricultural policies discriminating against the traditional, subsistence farmer. Many small cultivators were forced to grow cash crops and were incorporated into commercial agriculture, with its heavy depencence on expensive inputs and Western expertise.

Once the traditional existence was tampered with, it locked the farmer into a system of ever increasing costs, particularly exacerbated by the Oil Crisis in the mid-70's. Increasingly, the farmers became more dependant on outside support and their flexibility and mobility were seriously reduced. With large farm investments and exclusive cash cropping, small farmers became dependent and vulnerable to many external factors, from which they could not pick up and leave. In this period the population increased approximately four times and farming systems became incompatible with traditional drought hazard practices.

Yet, the climate began to change and consequently, so did the carrying capacity of the land. However, this time there was no place to go and farmers could not easily adapt by moving, even if there were free lands. The pastoralists and farmers both were restricted from the full use of the environment by political boundaries, minefields and barbed-wire. The more well holes drilled had increased the cattle density and range, which left little vegetation untouched. And most

Bob: Ted, Carol & Alice
Jojo: An M.J. wind up dancing doll (just in case you ever tire of dancing during the day) with extra glitter gloves and track shoes
Mary: Prince's leather pants and a certain drummer
Eleni: Prince
Luan and Kelly: the three wise men and St. Nick
Gus T: 1. a grudge tennis challenge with Carling Bassett - unchaperoned
2. a fly
Mary R and Carmen: nothing you've both got everything, looks, publicity and Gary's approval
Mike Whitley: doubles lessons
Al H
Al H.: phone numbers
George: a lucky star
Howie and Alon: accents?
Augustus: a banana
Antenella: namo-in the form of a lawyer - case closed
Dina and Dina: "R-E-S-P-E-C-T"
Ira: a rhum with a view
Gary: a pilot in which he stars as a good looking (cute) witty adopted child - perhaps Alex Karras could star as his dad
Ennis: loss of gullibility - from Leo
Johnny: a new area of study - Dave Suzuki suggested this one
From S.C., P.Z., M.J.

Dear W
No cute or witty poems; just "Merry Christmas" and "Happy Anniversary!" Two years is no small feat. Love you for sticking it through.
Always, VV

The mercury's slowly declining
The sky's a smoky blue,
A warmth I feel I'm finding,
Comes from my love for you.

The snow begins a-drifting,
Carefully covering up the town,
Really hope to me you're listening
I love having you around.

Santa's standing at every corner,
Waving and shouting: Ho! Ho! Ho!
For Frosty there's crystal they've formed her,
With tender loving care and snow,
snow, snow.

Jesus was born Christmas Day you know now,
This season's to celebrate his love,
Remembering his faith, his know how,
We really must thank the Lord above.
In the background the music's playing,
My thoughts you've truly inspired,
I hope you understand all I'm saying,
In my heart you're more than I desired.

The fire's burning so brightly,
The champagne's so bubbly and pink,
You're holding me nice and tightly,
Looking into each other's eyes the glasses we clink.

With arms crossed and smiling,
Slowly hands are raised and glasses lifted.
Listening to the fireplace a-crackling,
Our taste buds delighted, for the champagne we've sipped it.

This feeling I have's so intriguing,
I hope you feel the same way I do,
It's hard to explain what's happening,
All I can say is that I've fallen in love with you.

Merry Christmas Goof,
Love your Princess

In this joyous season amidst the hustle and bustle of Christmas preparations; the stocking stuffers and decorations, the mistletoe, rum and eggnog, and carolling, let us remember the true celebration is His birth:
"For unto you is born a Savior, who is Christ the Lord"
Let us remember the sole purpose of His birth was for His death, so that man might live for evermore.
On behalf of SCCE, to all a happy and safe holiday" Special thanks again to the Underground.
God bless.

To all my staff: It's been a fun half year, hasn't it? Well Christmas time is a fun time, so what if I B.S. a little. Have an enjoyable holiday! But remember, be back in January!!!
Legé, The Big Man.

Valerie: You really do look nice. What you do mean what do 'I' mean. So you're introverted a bit, who gives a shiii....

Steve: I sure as hell don't want to argue with you. If your profs can't beat you in an arguement, I certainly have no chance. I know that whenever I want an Editorial to get me into deep water, I should consult you. Also remember, Principal/Principle.

To Kevin Sack: It's been a while since you promised to start your own newspaper. Hard huh? And stop stealing my Assistant Editor to discuss stuff! She's not a free agent yet, remember! Well, have a good holiday this Christmas. Don't relax too much though, you have to prepare for the SAC presidency next year!

Dear Beeutiful EVELYN: I know you just hate the gossip in the office, but why, it's not about you. You are the only person I know who will take one hour to go over a story just for this little ol' paper. Damn good work!
A known admirer. (All the males in the Underground office. Just kiddin').

For Hanifi baby: Stop putting my lifesaving skills into work, flooding went out with Noah. I know, you were just trying to clean the tiles. Pleeeease, no more! P.S. good pics, what few we get!
You know

To Barb and Ann, our lone typesetters: Thanks a hell of a lot. When things on the paper got tough, you got going. Thanks.
The Underground.

Sandra: Even though we're running around like crazy on production nights, and act like crazed crazies, we do appreciate your help. Keep coming out in the new year! In the meantime, have a nice holiday recovering from the experience of working with us. Being a first yearer and joining the paper takes guts. See you in Jan.

To Nigel: What potential, what grace, what good looks, damn Nigel, we almost didn't make this paper due to your absence. Hope you return in the new year. Have a nice rest.

Alvin: No more subs for you on distribution, it just encourages Hanif to eat also, and before you know it, it's midnight before the papers are on the stands. Stick with us and you'll get more film.

Santa's list for the Underground office:
Paul Legge: For Paul, Santa will be bringing a one year's supply of exacto knives and a new girlfriend. (sorry, a girlfriend.) Since Paul is a fussy concerning specifics, Santa is looking into renting Drew Barrymore for an evening with the Editor.

Hugh McLean: Santa will be bringing Hugh some enthusiasm. Hugh will now be able to laugh at jokes spontaniously (instead of being cued.) Hugh will also be able to make decisions in two minutes instead of two days.

Patrice Persaud: Little Patrice will be receiving a book of hairstyles from Glemby coiffures. Patrice will then be at leisure to decide upon a bob, perm, shag, whatever without boring others in the office.

Thomas Schmidt: To go along with Thomas' new hairdo, Santa will be bringing him a year's supply of Aramis hair gel. Thomas will also receive a gift certificate to Eatons' boys clothing department. Thomas can then go back to shool, preppie look.

Hanif Sarangi: Santa will be bringing Hanif a years supply of heavy duty masking tape for his car. Rudolph the Red-nosed reindeer has volunteered his services to tow Hanif's car to the nearest garage, when it falls apart one night after production.

Douglas,
Merry Christmas!

The best and worst this year,

On Track: 1984 in Review

By Michael Hayward

It seems to be a tradition at year's end to tell everyone what the best and worst of the year was. Here is my version of what was good and bad in 1984 in domestic and imported music (imports designated by *)

Extended version and remixes. I can't choose between Shriekback's *Hand on my Heart, Two Tribes (Annihilation) by Frankie and Level 42's *Hot Water (Mastermix). The worst is easy: *This Is Mine by Heaven 17 is laughably bad.

Dance tracks. Most popular are Let's Go Crazy by Prince and the dance mix of The Reflex by Duran Duran, but I like Smalltown Boy by Bronski Beat because it is one of the most original dance songs ever.

Video singles. We're Not Gonna Take It by Twisted Sister for a few laughs. The Reflex was my early favourite and it is certainly the best concert video around, but the new version of Relax done by Brian DePalma (as seen in Body Double) takes the cake. The worst is Stevie Wonder's I Just Called to Say I Love You.

The Top Five Songs. (not necessarily singles).
1) David Sylvian - The Ink in the Well
2) Jane Siberry - Mimi on the Beach
3) Scritti Politti - *Hypnotize
4) The Smiths - *How Soon is Now?
5) The Armoury Show - *Castles in Spain

Producer. Overall, production quality has never been better, but I'd pick Mike Howlett for China Crisis' Working With Fire and Steel or Trevor Horn for Frankie's Pleasuredome as examples of the best. Lose Control by Durango 95 finds itself at the other end of the spectrum.

Quality. Excluding high-priced audiophile discs and basing choices only on vinyl and packaging, Windham Hill releases are hands-down winners with clean pressings and high quality sleeves. On the other hand, I have tried two copies of Hysteria by the Human League without success - bad pressings.

Cover Art and Concept. Windham Hill boasts clean elegant covers. The understated graphics and photo on Mark Isham's Vapor Drawings make it my favourite. For more mainstream tastes, Frankie covers (any of them) are best. The worst covers belong to Alphaville for Forever Young (revolting) and Oasis by Kitaro, which was just released domestically with a new, terrible sleeve drawing, light years removed from the tasteful import release cover that matched the musical style well.

Surprises and Disappointments. The biggest surprise of the year is an import LP called *It'll End in Tears by This Mortal Coil. It's actually an album of sessions by artists from the 4AD label of England (Howard DeVoto, Modern English, Cocteau Twins, etc.). It is at times ambient; and is utterly great. The biggest disappointment has to be How Men Are by Heaven 17 followed by Knife by Aztec Camera.

Worst Albums. How Men Are by Heaven 17 and Gordon Deppe's Listen to the City tie for the (dis)honour of being worst for 1984 in my book.

Best Albums.
1) Frankie Goes To Hollywood - Welcome to the Pleasuredome
2)Matt Bianco - *Whose Side Are You On?
3)This Mortal Coil - *It'll End in Tears
4) Level 42 - Standing in the Light
5) China Crisis - Working With Fire & Steel
6) David Sylvian - Brilliant Trees
7) Joe Jackson - Body and Soul
8) Jane Siberry - No Borders Here
9) Simple Minds - Sparkle in the Rain
10) Alphaville - Forever Young

Mike Hayward hosts the CSCR Import Show Mondays at 9 p.m. and Wednesdays at 3 p.m. on 90.5 Cable F.M., and is a regular contributor to Vinyl Performance. Imports courtesy of Star Records, 3160 Eglington Ave. E.

Restaurant Review

Spiffy's

One of the newer nightspots on the Scarberian scene is Spiffy's eatery and dance emporium, at the top of the bluffs. Located about fifteen minutes from Scarborough Campus, Spiffy's is an attractive restaurant/pub for get-togethers.

After three years of serving the public, Spiffy's has undergone many pleasant changes in theme and decor. Spiffy's look has always been that of a pub with a dancing atmosphere. However, changes to the menu itself indicates that Spiffy's has become a full-fledged restaurant. Their new bill of fare has undergone a transformation from burgers and chicken wings to steak and veal. A few of the recommended entrees are the fillet of sole almondine and chicken coq au vin. The lasagna and barbeque ribs are also excellent choices, but do not fear, Spiffy's still offers potatoskins and chicken wings for people who just want to nibble. Despite these new additions, however, the prices are very reasonable. But, let us not forget the reason for Spiffy's original popularity; the nightspot atmosphere.

To begin with, Spiffy's has a tri-level seating arrangement to appeal to all tastes. The first secton contains an old-fashioned wood bar with all the brass attachments, reminiscent of "Cheers". If standing up at a bar is not your idea of fun you can sit down on the padded bench, underneath hanging plants and antique ceiling fans. Looking around this section, one is treated to a collection of memorabilia that rivals Mother's. As evident by the abundance of football and hockey sweaters on the wall, Spiffy's has a large sports following. It even has a weekly dart league every Tuesday night.

On the next level is the dance section of the bar. Decorated with the same hanging plants and ceiling fans (the fans are a welcome blessing when you're dancing up a storm), this area has a dimly lit and warm setting. Solid pine tables, lit by candles, encircle a rather modest dance floor. Unlike most bars which carry sound systems rivalling the Jacksons', patrons at Spiffy's are given the chance to hear one another. Not to say that the sound is not exciting. Spiffy's has invested a considerable amount into a modern sound system which provides for good clean listening without mind-blowing distortion. The music ranges from top 40 to funk, including classics from the 60's. The selections are usually well received by the crowd, which is evident from the always crowded dance floor. The light system is also worthy of mention.

Finally, the top level provides more candle-lit tables and a stand-up bar for the singles clientele. One word of mention is that you should avoid the top level if you're a non-smoker because the smoke does tend to collect in the higher sections of the bar.

The clientele, in general, ranges from singles to couples, from students to professionals. The average age group is roughly 21-30 years. There is a dress code in effect, but this is just aimed at faded jeans and cut-off T-shirts. There is a coat check provided, which comes in handy during the winter months.

The impression one gets of Spiffy's is that of class. It is very rare for an establishment to offer both good and good times, but Spiffy's has managed to do so. The staff is weel presented and ftiendly which makes the evening all the more pleasant. With theme nights such as Ladies' Night and Two-for-One Tuesdays (all the dinners on the menu are two for one), Spiffy's offers something for everyone. With all of its new additions Spiffy's can be assured of a continuing success as the number one bar at the top of the bluffs.

Orford String Quartet visits Scarborough campus

By Dave MacKenzie

The concert by the Orford String Quartet, The University of Toronto's quartet in-residence, performed for an appreciative audience in the Meeting Place Last Sunday afternoon. This was the first of a series of five free concerts organized by the Cultural Affairs Committee of the SCSC.

The quartet began their program of classical music with a sample of Irving Glick's compositions. To the delight of the audience, Mr. Glick rose from among the spectators and took a bow on stage after we had heard his music which is often filled with dark, moody emotion.

We were also treated to some of the quartet's personal favourites which included the music of Dvorjek and Pucini as well as an enthusiastic rendition of the Beatles' song Something.

The second half of the concert was entirely devoted to the great composer Franz Peter Schubert's String Quartet 14 in D Minor known as Death and the Maiden.

The perfection of the Orford String Quartet's performances has classed them among the six best in the world, and judging from the spirited standing ovation by the audience at the end of the concert, the people who came to listen on Sunday shared this sentiment.

The opportunity of seeing groups like the Orford Quartet truly enhances university life and hopefully the success of this first free concert will draw more people to the next one by the Ed Bickert/Lorne Lofsky Jazz Quartet scheduled for January 20.

"If I had my way we wouldn't let any kids in!"

Rabid Transit- Not your average Night- 'stop'

By Andrew Pyle and Alvin Ng

The TTC may not be the better way, but once you've experienced Scarborough's newest theatre group Rabid Transit, you'll make it your number one stop for entertainment.

The Scarborough Theatre scene has never had a reputation for being dynamic; that is, not until Rabid Transit made their debut with Subway to Hell at Cabaret East. Cabaret East is a dinner theatre, but its path strays from those of the tie-and-jacket establishments. Instead, the emphasis here is on a casual, good-times approach. This is a place where one can truly relax and be actively entertained.

Subway to Hell is the result of six month's work involving the talents of some of Toronto's finest improvisational artists. The production focuses on different aspects of Toronto life, from ultra-violent neighbourhood crime and Cabbage Patch Kid mania, to naturally, the subway.

Spontaneity is the key to a series of alternately satirical and serious views of some of the things we overlook in our daily existence, nad the target of their repertoire of sketches includes Bell Canada, the Pickering Power Plant, and the CBC. The troupe employs a mixture of comedy and quasi-horror special effects (a feature unique in itself) to not only invoke laughter, but to prod the audience into a state of amused self-reflection.

The improvisational sketches on the other hand, are inventive, drawing upon the audience participation, and demonstrating the exceptional talent present throughout the troupe, whose cast includes Wendy Hopkins, Simon Richards, Frank Scott, Ken Innes and Kat Mullaly. All the members of Rabid Transit have had extensive experience in comedy and serious acting, and this is evident in the professionalism with which they carry their roles. In the course of an evening, the troupe uses most effectively the space it has available on stage, and the large number of costumes worn helps to highlight the fast-paced and tremendously energetic performance. Although a lot of the humour in the show is very well suited to students (with their attendant strange thoughts), it is not aimed exclusively at the young but is meant to appeal to all ages and all walks of life.

The person responsible for writing most of Subway to Hell is Ken Innes, who also directs the production. However, according to Innes the aim of the troupe is to allow as much cast involvement as possible, since it is ultimately the effort of the entire cast that is perceived by the audience. When asked why some of the sketches in Subway to Hell pertain to such problems as crime and social paranoia, Innes replied that his experience as a "bitter young man" have led to his "tending to be very aware and very sensitive about the way things are." But Innes believes that one must try to laugh occasionally in life, instead of pulling one's hair while locked inside a closet. While it is difficult at this time to put a life span on the production, the cast is hopeful that it will continue well into the spring of 1985. In light of the calibre of the show, it would not be wise to bet against this occuring.

One thing that did come as a surprise however, was the undeservedly small audience present on the night of the review. There are two possible reasons for this. First, the location of the venue is not ideal for this kind of entertainment, and second, Scarborough itself is not known for its theatrical enthusiasm. But, according to Rabid Transit's Henry Monteforti, improved turnouts are only a question of gaining a wider reputation as the group attempts to establish itself.

Ethiopian Feature

importantly, this time the nomads were not able to move back to their traditional areas, since the farmers had moved in to replace them.

In a nutshell, the market economics had encouraged peasant farmers to cultivate more land to pay for the goods and tools utilized in competing for production of crops for cash. This upward spiral of indebtedness and the increase in rural populations intensified cultivation and threatened land fertility. Land hunger was already growing. Pastoralists, given disease controls for their livestock and herds which began overgrazing, as agricultural encroachment and national boundaries restricted their movement. The peoples' traditional flexibility to natural hazards had been undermined.

The aid and development programs that had been initiated were probably well intentioned and welcomed, (traditional subsistence existence was certainly no romantic paradise) yet not well-thought out. They might have created more suffering than otherwise would have occurred. What is important is what we learn from our past mistakes and how we can use that knowledge to present appropriate ecologically balanced solutions.

Professor Bryan points out one essential factor. "The Green Revolution focused heavily on fertilizers, now we know we need to replace in the soil something more (organic material, soil conditioners) than just nutrients in order to maintain it's critical physical structure and intregity. In the past, we threw money and specialists at development issues, and neglected the unique nature of each piece of land and the people, who had grown intimately familiar and attuned with it over centuries."

"Self-help, small scale programs work, and you don't need PhD's to carry them out. We do need people with a sensitive, clear appreciation and general understanding of the factors involved." The successful, small-scale, inexpensive and self-sustained programs in the south of Ethiopia support Bryan's idea.

What is fundamental for us all to appreciate is that any real improvement and equitable development programs will take a long time. We can not coerce, dictate or tempt people into accepting our solutions. The people have their own experience, knowledge and ideas of what will work for them and what won't. Who better to listen to and exchange with?

Let's join together in giving these people two truly memorable and meaningful Christmas gifts; money for immediate food relief and respectful support, allowing them to create their own indigenous solutions appropriate to their own particular problems. We could We would ask for no less.

MY DARLING PATRICE

Christmas takes on a special meaning when we're together.

As it is often said, Christmas is a time for sharing.

My sole wish is to share my life with you.

Nobody could make me any happier than you do.

Co-ed Touch Football champs crowned

By Scott McBride and Karl Brand

The 1984 Co-ed Touch Football league's CFL, NFL and USFL divisional champions were crowned last Thursday as the league's playoff schedule ran throughout the week. A number of extremely exciting games were played during quarter-final, semi-final and championship action. The fans were treated to what was undoubtedly the most exciting day of the year on Thursday. All 3 champions also won their respective divisions during regular season play.

The league's premier division, the CFL had both the semi-final and championship game played on Thursday. These two hard-fought games were the most exciting games all year, as both winners were determined in overtime. In the 2:00 semi-final, the Free Agents faced the Alcoholics, in proved to be an unbelievable game. The Free Agents tied the score 12-12 late in the game to force overtime. After 10 minutes of overtime, the game was still deadlocked as each team scored a touchdown. The second overtime period was sudden death, and the Free Agents won the game 25-19 on captain Chris Fosters touchdown reception.

The victory put the Free Agents, the league champion for the past two year, in to the final against Total Arrogance. Total Arrogance, who qualified for the final by defeating the Steelers 33-12 in their semi-final game, were led by the CFL division's leading scorer, Sandra McLeister. They also had the top male scorer, Karl Brand, and the division's top defenders, Brand and teammate Scott McBride, who were tied with Luie Yi of the Wee Squirts.

The game turned out to be just as exciting as the semi-final game. Again the Free Agents were forced into overtime, as the score was tied 19-19, with both teams playing extremely well. A dramatic overtime period was won by Total Arrogance on Suzanne McMillan's touchdown catch, while the Free Agents were shutout during overtime. Thus giving the Total Arrogance team the championship.

The NFL division championship saw the powerful Mighty Mites shutout a stubborn Nitros squad 18-0, in what was a very close, well played defensive struggle. Christine KoFoed, the division's regular season scoring champion, caught a touchdown ball while the division's top defender, teammate Rich McCallum, had 2 second half interceptions to seal the championship for the Mighty Mites. The Nitros reached the final after upsetting the second place AACSA team, 30-0. In the other semi-final game, the Mighty Mites defeated the Winers, who were led by the division's top male scorer Paul McIntyre, by a score of 31-6. The Mighty Mites and Total Arrogance each lost only one game during the year.

The only team in this year's Co-ed Touch Football league to go undefeated was the Running Rebels who won the USFL division championship game 34-25, over the second place 69ers. The 69ers reached the final when they shutout the Killer Smurfs. The Smurfs were led by the entire league's top scorer Marilyn Smith, who had 149 points. The division's top male scorer, Scott Collins had 20 points for the 69ers during their semi-final victory.

The Running Rebels made it to the final after their semi-final win over Mitches Bitches, 19-13, in the most dramatic finish of the year. With the score tied, and Mitches Bitches driving for the upset victory, the Rebels' Kaedman Nancoo intercepted a pass and ran it all the way back for the winning touchdown as the clock ran out. Nancoo was the division's top defender.

The regular season meeting between the two finalists ended in a tie, but Marcia Hubbs' 28 points helped the Running Rebels win the USFL division crown over the 69ers, 34-25m in another classic confrontation.

Special thanks go out to referees Tony Lee, Joe Madill, Kaedman Nancoo, Jim Sidsworth and Penn YuyiTung, as well as timekeeper Maltie Naraine. See you all next season!!

Mulock Cup goes to St. Mike's

By Paul Kossta

In the Men's Football championship game last Tuesday St. Mike's defeated Scarborough 31-9. The victory gave SMC their fourth consecutive Mulock Cup.

The final outcome was not indicative of the play as the match was a defensive struggle until the last half of the fourth quarter. In that segment, SMC scored three touchdowns to put the game out of reach. Two of the touchdowns were on long pass plays to flanker Neil Beaulieu from quaterback Chris Power.

At halftime, the score was 10-1 for SMC. SMC got their touchdown because of a Scarborough miscue of a punt attempt with 30 seconds left. SMC pounced on the ball at Scarborough's one yard line. smc running back Pins Pate rushed for the major.

Although both teams admitted that the failed punt attempt was the crucial play of the match, Scarborough coach Chris Tree felt that his team should have been able to come back and win the game. However a very agressive SMC defence repeatedly stopped the Scarborough offence.

SMC coach Lex Byrd was elated with the victory and commented that his team had become stronger as the contest progressed. Scarborough coaches Tree and Henderson felt that the lack of practice time throughout the year had finally caught up to the team.

Despite the loss, the Scarborough team should not view the season as a write-off. The squad had an undefeated year, including a regular season win over St. Mike's.

Overall, the players should be commended for their outstand-performances this year. Especially those tireless workers who receive little public recognition, recognition that they richly deserve.

Finally, the coaching staff of Chris Tree, Russ Henderson, Bob Harris and Chris Maksimovich are to be both congratulated and thanked for their great dedication to the football programme at this College.

'A' Hockey ready

By Rob Crummey

After six weeks of tryouts, the Scarborough Men's 'A' Hockey Team opened their 1984/85 campaign against New College on Mon., Nov. 19th at Varsity Arena. With the exception of fine goal-tending by Tom Hans, the team's debut was very disappointing. Sloppy passing and sluggish play led to a 3-1 upset in favour of New College. Scarborough trailed 2-0 late in the second period when Joe Porter fired home a deflected slapshot. However, Scarborough's late surge was foiled by an empty net goal which sealed the outcome of the season opener.

Scarborough defeated Law 6-2 the following week on Mon. Nov. 26. The team's aggresive forechecking and sound defensive play overwhelmed a suprisingly tough opponent. Scarborough trailed 2-1 early in the second period. However, six unanswered goals throughout the remainder of the contest proved to be the difference. Every member of the Scarborough squad must be commended for a fine come-from-behind victory.

Scarborough's season continues on Sunday Dec. 2nd against Upper College. All games are played at Varsity Arena. Fan support would be greatly appreciated.

Scarborough and Trent fight it out in Basketball

By Paul Kossta

Last Friday night on campus, an exhibition basketball doubleheader was scheduled between Trent University and Scarborough College. The Women's team and the Men's "A" squad were to play but the Trent Women's club were unable to attend.

However, the men's game was played, with Trent-winning 77-73. The match was extremely exciting and featured fast-paced offensive action. Scarborough led 35-32 at the half, but a lapse early in the second half saw Trent-open up a ten point lead. Scarborough fought back and came within one point with five minutes to play but Trent was able to hang on for the victory.

Trent player Neil Rose, who also acts as coach, felt his squad was able to take the ten point lead because Scarborough switched from a zone defense to a man-to-man defense. Rose said his physical club is better able to utilize 6'7" centre Randy Sweers in man-to-man coverage.

Scarborough coach Doug Martin said his team switched to the man-to-man defense because they were having problems containing Sweers. Martin explained that Sweers was the difference because Scarborough has no player comparable in height.

High scorers in the game for Trent were Jeff Amery, 21 points and Toby Young, 14 points. Scarborough was led by Graig Hunter, 18 points, Chuck Doran, 14 points, and Keith Pennells, 14 points.

Scarborough's next league action is this Tuesday against Law in the Scarborough gym.

Team has yet to lose in three years,

Scar 'B' Hockey still unbeaten

By Craig Inward

Scarborough's 'B' Ice Hockey Team was true to form during last Tuesday's season opener. They convincingly trounced Dentristry 7-0 to extend their regular season unbeaten streak into its third year.

This year's season was delayed longer than usual by extensive renovations to Varsity Arena. However, this wait coupled with an excruciatingly long try-out period contributed to the intensity displayed during the game by the players.

Mark Porter, who was voted team captain by the players and coaches after the game, led the Scarborough side with a goal and two assists. Alan Paul had a strong game netting two goals from his new positon centering Rick Wagner and Jim Stoddart. Wagner and Stoddart were elected the new assistant captains after the game.

Bruce Collict marked his return to Scarborough hockey with an assist. Two rookies who had strong debuts in this interfaculty competition were John Doma (brother of veteran James Doma), who turned in a goal and an assist, and defenceman Steve McGann.

Pete Webb and Jamie Walker scored the other Scarborough markers.

Though facing only five shots, fourth year goalie Mark Gylys turned in a strong performance for his shut-out.

Despite the intensity displayed in the first period, this lop-sided game wasn't really a test of the Scarborough team's ability. The test came in the next game on Sunday night, when the let down in the second period of the first game carried over to the beginning of the match with the newly demoted Trinity 'A' squad.

After being sent down to the 'B' division from 'A', the Trinity players obviously had something to prove and came out flying, sending a scare into the Scarborough side early in the match.

Rookie goalie Rob Burns gave a stalwart performance in his first appearance in the Scarborough net. He turned away eight of the nine shots in a 2-1 victory.

The Scarborough outfit was a bit flat in the early going and struggled against a never say die Trinity squad in a game that was littered with many clean hits from both sides. It was not until well into the second period that John Bird drew the B's up even with a shot from the blueline.

Rick Wiebe blasted home the knock-out blow from the slot late in the final period after a neat play with his line-mates Porter and Webb, who drew assists on the goal.

Scarborough coach Brad Orr, back for his third year at the helm, praised his team saying they played a good tough game but that they would need to keep their intensity up for the whole schedule if they are to become champions for the third year in a row.

After the game the players were remarkably subdued which was in direct contrast to the opening rookie celebrations on Tuesday, a night which many would now like to forget.

The date and times of the next game were unknown at the time of this writing but the team would still like to see everyone come out and cheer them on anyway.

Men's ball hockey begins quest for championship

By Bill Joly

The Men's Ball Hockey league starts their quest for the championship of the 1984 fall season this week. If the games are as close as their final standings, the playoffs should be exciting.

Last week in the A Division, the Hooters and the Bushwackers played to a 1-1 tie. This defensive struggle was indicative of the close low-scoring games. Unfortunately two players were ejected for fighting and as a result are both suspended for 12 months. The referees and league must be respected for their stand on violence in an attempt to make ball hockey a respectable sport.

The playoffs should be interesting as the Hooters, A.L.F. Bushwackers and Muff Divers all have goals-against-averages below 1. The Hooters and A.L.F. finished tied with 4-0-2 records, with the Bushwackers and Muff Divers placing 1-1-3 records.

The B Division seems to have slightly higher scoring games, but the end result was a fierce battle for the final playoff spot. D. Hartley with his two goal performance led the No Implications to a 3-0 victory over the S.T.D.'s. The S.T.D.' needed at least a tie to make the playoffs, coupled with a loss by the Pub Crawlers. They were disappointed on both counts as the Pub Crawlers defeated the Rectums in a 9-4 shootout. Neither team had goalies. Al Lobo, Brian Facey and Fred Lightfoot each netted 2 goals to race the Crawlers to victory. The United Nations and the Spring Box were both eliminated from the playoffs, but the U.N. still managed to get by their opponents 2-1 on goals by Richard Lamb, and Demetro Boudris. The Other Guys were idly and kept their undefeated record atop the B Division with 10 points.

In C Division action, the Psycho Killers crushed the Inmates 8-0, led by Peter Glarentzos' three goals, and Peter Mallouk's and Joe Madill had the other pairs for the Killers. Despite the loss, Rod Morin played a strong game for the Inmates showing a great deal of hustle. Goaltenders N Musagi (A Team) and Kurt Lang (Panthers) played strong games as their teams battled to a 1-1 draw. Congratulations tc the Mighty Mites!!

Girl's Volleyball takes doubleheader

By Nigel Alty

The Scarborough Women's Volleyball team triumphed in what proved to be a quickly executed doubleheader against St. Hilda on Mon. Nov. 26th. the winning scores were 15-0, 15-12. These relatively close scores reflect the overall disappointing performance displayed by Scarborough.

The unity and enthusiasm often associated with the Scarborough team, was not apparent in the game. This lack of incentive could be simply attributed to over confidence or the absence of Lisa Depew, a key player.

It was evident in the first game that both teams were disorganized and confused. Many potential points were lost because of the inability to co-operate and call the ball.

However, the game saw a number of outstanding plays by both Scarborough and St. Hilda's. There were numerous exchanges of volleys and tips and the blocking was exceptional.

The dynamic duo, consisting of Cheryl Ann Smith and Sandy Smyth were extraordinary. They blocked several crucial spikes and volleys which proved to be the highlight of the game. Equally impressive was St. Hilda's Christina Charles who virtually towered over the net. This enabled her to deflect the ball anywhere on the court. Charles delivered many unreturned spikes and tips, and Scarborough found it difficult to penetrate her defensive skills.

In the second game, St. Hilda'a jumped into a suprisingly comfortable lead. Early in the game, St. Hilda's led 7-1. This was unusual for a team who showed only mediocre talent in the previous game. St. Hilda' suddenly became a threatening force and would not be subdued by the Scarborough team who were playing at half their potential.

Scarborough was not intimidated however, and fought back with determination. During the struggle, Scarborough was able to recoup their losses to defeat St. Hilda's in the second game.

Although the squad was not up to par in this match the St. Hilda's coach felt that in general, Scarborough was a "finely tuned team."

Men's Basketball 6-1

By Mike Miller

The Scarborough College Men's B basketball team upped its record to 6-1 with an easy victory over the SGS Grads. The win tops off a five game winning streak and gives Scarborough a share of first place in their division.

Scarborough was never challenged during the game and led 24-15 at the half. The team used a zone defence which kept SGS shooting form the perimeter with Scarborough getting all the rebounds. In the second half Scarborough switched to a man to man defence and dominated the play.

Leading the scoring for Scarborough were Jim Anderson with 16 points, Jim Richardson with 13 points, Dave Douse and Greg Nicholson each with 6 points.

A big factor in Scarborough's good play was the fact that they dominated both the offensive and defensive boards. Special mention goes to Karl Brand, Scott McBride, Jim Richardson and Greg Nicholson.

The team does not have another game until after the new year when they try and lock up first place to get home court advantage forthe playoffs.
